I have lived in East Kilbride for 40 years and worked locally for 21 years in a well-known high street retailer. In recent years I started working for Home Energy Scotland and this developed my interest in the social housing sector. It links very well to my role as a partnership officer where I regularly connect with and support other organisations right across Strathclyde and Central. Fuel poverty is still high on the agenda for lots of households across all tenures and I understand well the impact it has on families and their daily lives along with the challenges of reducing carbon emissions in Scotland.

Working with the board and staff at EKHA gives me the opportunity to continuously develop my skills and experience in this sector. It also allows me to contribute some of my own knowledge and experience to EKHA. There are always lots of challenges but the reward is being part of a great team. As they say, 'Teamwork makes the dream work'.

My hobbies include socialising, cooking for friends and family, upcycling furniture and some walking thrown into the mix and trips to Europe whenever I can, especially Italy.
